

The revolution in January 2011 radically transformed the perspectives for Tunisia's relations with the European Union, with the EU almost doubling its financial support, from the €80 million initially planned for 2011 to €160 million committed in response to events; the adoption of a new ENP Action Plan (AP) deepening relations in the framework of a privileged partnership will mark an important stage in bilateral relations. These are some of the conclusions of the report on progress made on implementation of the EU-Tunisia ENP Action Plan between 1 January and 31 December 2011, released on May 2012 by the European Commission.
